We have heard nothing of late about the tannery that was to have been started in our neighboring town of Benson. To us this appears to be an industry of impertance and one of great possibilities for anyone who would undertake it with sufficient capital to push it to successful conclusions that is being overlooked. With abundance of raw material at her very door Benson is certainly a favored locality for an enterprise of this kind, and with every encouragement for the sinking for arteman water, and an almost certainty of striking an abundant flow at not a great depth, a Incrative business can be built up at this point in the tanning of fine leather.
